Leverage WSH in preparing your business and employees for the post COVID-19 workplace of the future.

The sixth edition of The Singapore Workplace Safety and Health (WSH) Conference will take place on 17-18 November 2020 as a virtual conference.

As the premier platform for workplace safety and health stakeholders across the region, the Singapore WSH Conference attracts regulators, industry leaders and safety professionals to help identify the problems businesses face today in order to formulate recommendations, and develop and implement best practices. This collaborative effort helps ensure that there is continuous improvement and advancement of safety standards in the workplace.

The turbulence brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic is set to be protracted. There are great uncertainties as businesses battle economic fallout, and face immense transformation challenges. To prepare businesses for the journey to recovery, the Singapore WSH Conference will present ideas and rich experiences from renowned speakers on how workplace safety and health can help businesses as they work towards regaining their footing during this period.
