TRANSFORMING AND EMERGING STRONGER AS AN INDUSTRY

Like the rest of the world, COVID-19 has had a rippling effect on Singapore's built environment sector. As we recover from COVID-19 and evolve to meet new challenges, the built environment sector must find new opportunities to transform and emerge stronger as an industry. Join us as we re-imagine this future of building a more sustainable, resilient and robust built environment – sign up for IBEW now, time is ticking away!

What is next for the built environment sector, amid the ambitious sustainability targets, technology revolutions and the industrywide drive towards greater synergy of the fragmented and project-focused construction value chain? Hear from our Guest of Honour, Minister for National Development Mr. Desmond Lee, as he shares about the exciting new developments and his vision for the sector.

Try picturing our built environment sector in a decade or two's time. What do you see? Does it look different from the industry that you know now? You will be right to think so, and 'Innovation' plays a major role in driving this change. Be a part of this discussion in IBEW on how leading firms are leveraging on innovation to transform their businesses and drive for growth!

The Built Environment (BE) Demo Day is an opportunity to hear promising innovators pitch their emerging technologies and network with other corporates and investors in the ecosystem. Nine start-ups will be featured across diverse domains of advanced sustainable design, automation and robotics, as well as digital asset delivery and management. An esteemed panel of judges will also bring their expertise and perspectives to award start-ups that bring the most 'Impact' and 'Innovation' to the industry, as well as the 'Rising Star' that recognises innovators under pre-Series A.
