Dear colleagues and partners,

I am pleased to share the Building and Construction Authority's (BCA) Annual Report 2020-2021 with you.

The theme of 'Emerging Stronger Together through Transformation' for this year's report is an apt one, especially in the tumultuous times we live in. It reflects the Built Environment sector's quiet resolve, strength and resiliency since the start of the pandemic. It bears testament to the hard work put in by many of us to ensure we would not be overcome by an invisible enemy.

Industry transformation will remain key to ensure our sector remains resilient. Transformation enables our sector to progress and create value for our partners, stakeholders and customers. More importantly, transformation also opens doors for a skilled and competent workforce to help shape and build a safe, liveable and sustainable Singapore that all of us interact on a daily basis with.

To this end, I am grateful for the strong partnerships we have forged throughout the past year with our stakeholders from the Trade Association and Chambers and the wider industry. I look forward to work with each and every one of you as we press on to secure a stronger and brighter future for Singapore.

I wish everyone good health and success.

Kelvin Wong
Chief Executive Officer
Building and Construction Authority
