Overview

Unpredictable conditions are likely to continue in 2022 for the construction industry. The ability to resolve disruptions and on-site disputes well has become a critical factor for survival and success. This webinar led by a certified international mediator, Mr Aloysius Goh, explains what to expect during a mediation and the preparations one can do to increase chances of a good outcome. Formerly the CEO of the Singapore International Mediation Centre, Aloysius today serves as a professional mediator. He has mediated numerous construction disputes and helped clients to achieve practical solutions which preserve business relationships and hard-earned reputation

About the speaker

Aloysius Goh

Founder and CEO Sage Mediation Pte Ltd

Mr Aloysius Goh is the Chief Executive Officer and Founder of Sage Mediation.

Certified as an international mediator, Aloysius has a strong track record of achieving practical solutions to complex commercial disputes. His mediation clients include listed companies, as well as charities, non-government organisations, and public sector entities.

In addition to having served as the Chief Executive Officer of the Singapore International Mediation Centre, Aloysius was the General Counsel of the Singapore Institute of Technology and had set up and led the Mediation Unit of the Ministry of Health.

Aloysius currently serves as a member of the International Mediation Institute's Appraisal Committee and the Madrid International Arbitration Centre Mediator Appointment Committee.

A National University of Singapore (NUS) Law School Research Scholar and a Public Service Commission Humanities Scholar, Aloysius has a Master's degree in Law from the NUS, and a Master's degree in Education Leadership from Boston College Lynch Education School.

Outside mediation, Aloysius is best described as a spiritual, family-oriented, fitness fanatic. He has spent a year living in the rule of silence in a French Catholic monastery, co-owns a Montessori Kindergarten, and has run more than 10 full marathons.
