- Unlocking Southeast Asia's Decarbonisation Potential
This session will discuss the outlook for Southeast Asia's energy transformation, opportunities and challenges for the region's decarbonisation, and the role of the IEA Regional Cooperation Centre in supporting clean energy transitions.
- Deep Dive: Bridging the Financing Gap to Support Clean Energy Transition
Financing is a key enabler for Southeast Asia's decarbonisation efforts. Moreover, emerging and developing economies (EMDEs) face an elevated cost of capital.

- Financing the Green Energy and Transition Activities in Southeast Asia
As countries aim to shift towards renewables, substantial investments will be needed to develop and deploy energy technologies and modernise their grid. This presents both opportunities and challenges to develop innovative financial mechanisms such as blended finance, to catalyse private commercial capital for marginally bankable projects and capital-intensive assets in Southeast Asia and beyond.
- Forging a Resilient Renewable Energy Ecosystem
As an engine of the global economic growth, regions such as Southeast Asia play a pivotal role in addressing the challenges of climate change. In this regard, there is an urgent need to unlock the region's considerable renewable energy potential through the development of new critical infrastructures, which will play an important role in enhancing regional decarbonisation initiatives.
- Regional Cooperation and Innovation in Accelerating the Energy Transition towards 2030
The closing panel of the Singapore-IRENA High-Level Forum will bring together leading energy thought leaders and policymakers to discuss the importance of regional cooperation and innovation in accelerating the energy transition towards the tripling of renewable energy capacity by 2030.
