PROGRAMME

financial instruments - the course makes the topic directly relevant to the built environment sector. Key topics include sustainable finance taxonomies, green building certification frameworks, and the role of second-party opinion providers. These elements clarify how green buildings are defined and validated for accessing sustainable capital.

Learning Approach

Through real-world case studies, the course illustrates pathways for building owners and project managers to access green finance for new projects and transition finance for greening existing assets. The goal is to bridge the framework gap between finance and sustainability, while raising awareness of how global and regional taxonomies (e.g., EU, ASEAN) are increasingly aligned with leading green building certifications, simplifying access to sustainable funding.

Attend the masterclass to gain a competitive edge in a rapidly evolving industry and position yourself at the forefront of sustainable finance in the built environment.
