SGBC Learning Session with BSD: Taking Practical Steps Towards Decarbonisation

Thursday, 24 September 2026 | 2:30PM – 4:30PM | In-Person Event

Green building certification provides an important foundation for advancing sustainability and supporting the built environment's transition towards net-zero emissions.

This SGBC Learning Session with SGBC Founding Member Building System and Diagnostics (BSD) will provide a practical introduction to how green building certification can support progress towards net zero. Participants will explore emerging trends in green building certification, the role of carbon emissions in the decarbonisation journey, and opportunities for organisations to take practical steps towards their net-zero goals. The session will also examine the business value of decarbonisation and introduce key carbon-accounting concepts. Through a hands-on activity, participants will gain a practical understanding of how carbon emissions are calculated and categorised, and how carbon data can inform decarbonisation strategies and decision-making.

Participants will gain practical insights into how to:

- Understand key trends in green building certification and their relevance to net-zero ambitions.
- Recognise the business drivers and opportunities for decarbonisation.
- Develop a foundational understanding of carbon accounting and emissions calculations.
- Identify practical opportunities and next steps towards a net-zero transition.
