SGBC LUNCH AND LEARN

SGBC Lunch and Learn with Zevero:

Making Carbon Data Work for

Your Business

Monday, 5 October 2026 | 12:00PM - 2:00PM | In-Person Event

As demand for lower-carbon buildings continues to grow, reliable environmental data is becoming increasingly important across the built environment value chain.

Manufacturers are facing growing expectations to provide Environmental Product Declarations (EPDs) and product-level emissions data, while developers and contractors require this information to assess embodied carbon, inform procurement decisions, meet tender requirements and support green building certifications. However, many organisations continue to navigate fragmented datasets, spreadsheets and varying methodologies, resulting in significant manual effort, inconsistencies and challenges in responding efficiently to evolving data requirements.

This Lunch and Learn with SGBC Member Zevero will explore how organisations can establish a reliable and centralised carbon data foundation to support diverse business and project requirements. The session will examine how operational and supply chain data can be used to develop product-level carbon calculations and EPDs, and how this information can subsequently support embodied carbon assessments across the built environment. G&W Ready Mix will join Zevero to share its experience in developing EPDs, providing practical insights into the drivers behind its EPD journey, the challenges encountered and how growing demand for product-level carbon information is influencing its business.
