SGBC Lunch and Learn:

Understanding Healthy Buildings

Beyond Green Mark Certification

Wednesday, 11 November 2026 | 12:00PM - 2:00PM | In-Person Event

Join Grobrix, Paia by CBRE and the Singapore Green Building Council (SGBC) for an eye-opening exploration of how modern architecture shapes our daily wellbeing.

Going beyond traditional sustainability benchmarks, this SGBC Lunch and Learn session examines the environments where we live and work—revealing how buildings directly impact the air we breathe, and how certifications such as the BCA Green Mark scheme and other green building standards translate these concerns into measurable design outcomes. The session will tackle indoor air quality challenges amid Singapore’s recurring haze episodes, as well as the potential of biophilic design to create healthier and more restorative spaces—showing how the BCA Green Mark scheme and green building certifications increasingly reward such approaches.

During the session, discover how Grobrix transforms passive biophilia into an active, interactive experience through modular indoor farming, and how these solutions can support green building certification goals around indoor environmental quality and occupant wellbeing. The session will conclude with a hands-on, 30-minute workshop led by Grobrix’s in-house nutritionist, exploring the science and health benefits of fresh, locally grown leafy greens, followed by lunch and informal networking.
